Air cargo market trend ex Korea

Protected trade and political and economic uncertainty are driving the global cargo market. In July, preliminary surveys of major international airport cargo shipments showed that the performance of airports continued to weaken with significant declines or slow growth.

The major airports in Asia and Europe, which were previously announced, are most affected by the US-China trade war, and the airlines that use these airports as hubs suffered as a direct result. [Cargopress]

The US-China trade dispute hits the global air cargo market, which turned red in the first half of this year. Although seasonal cargoes have been steadily recovering recently, contributing to performance growth, it was not enough to overcome the effects of trade disputes.

The table below shows CASS air cargo export tonnage by country in the top 10 countries. With the top 10 countries of China, the United States, Vietnam, Hong Kong, Japan and Germany they have achieved 40,606 tons and occupied 74.1% of total tonnage. There were some changes in the ranking compared to the same month of the previous year, and the total tonnage fell -10.7 percent from a year earlier.
